	3.	Since the Reichsbahn had not been able to assemble sufficient rolling stock for so large a movement of personnel and equipment, some units had to await transportation in the Neuruppin Forest, where they camped at both sides of a highway called Wittstocker Chaussee. The Neuruppin-Wittstock road was completely gutted with troops and equipment, and was closed to normal traffic.
	4.	About 800 men were loaded on three or four trains at the Altruppin station, and left in the direction of Loewenberg loctober. The trains also carried the following equipment:
25X1		30 T-34 tanks with obscured numbers 24 122-mm field howitzers
25X1 25X1		20 Three-axled armored personnel carriers 6 BA-64 armored cars approximately 100 trucks
25X1	5.	Also on 1 October, 2,000 men with black/red epaulets departed from Neuruppin towards Loewenberg and Wittstock. Between eight and twelve trains left the station with Soviet troops and equipment. The latter included the following:
25X1		30 T-34 tanks 15 three-axled armored personnel carriers
25X1		6 BA-64 armored cars 16 120-mm mortars 30 82-mm mortars 12 85-mm anti-aircraft guns 12 trucks with automatic anti-aircraft guns 20 radio trucks 20 mobile workshops 20 tank trucks 30 motorcycles with sidecars 250 trucks, 50 of which carried engineers' equipment
